ANALYSIS

THIS BILL

This bill would do the following:

- Repeal the farmworker housing assistance program from the Health and Safety Code.
- Add new language to the Health and Safety Code requiring the farmworker housing credit to be allocated in the same manner as the state low-income housing tax credit.
- Increase the maximum amount of low-income housing credit that may be allocated by $500,000, which is limited to low-income housing projects for farmworker households.
- Specify $500,000 annual cap plus any unallocated credit under prior law for farmworker households exclusively; if a disaster occurs, then nonfarmworker households can temporarily occupy vacant units.
- Add a provision that allows farmworker housing credits to be awarded independently of federal low-income housing credits.

Additionally, this bill would provide the following definitions:

- “Household” means an immediate family member who resides, or who have made application to reside together, as defined in the California Code of Regulations,<sup>1</sup> as a single family at a migrant center.
- “Agricultural worker” or “farmworker” has the same meaning as described in the Labor Code,<sup>2</sup> which means one engaged in agriculture. “Agriculture” is defined by the Labor Code<sup>3</sup> as farming in all its branches.
- “Farmworker housing” means housing for agricultural workers that are available to, and occupied by, only farmworkers and their households. The Committee may permit an owner to temporarily house nonfarmworkers in vacant units in the event of a disaster or other critical occurrence. However, the emergency shelter shall only be permitted if there are no pending qualified farmworker household applications for residency.

While this bill would repeal the California farmworker housing credit, it would add additional credit amounts to the California low-income housing credit that can be allocated for farmworker housing.

ECONOMIC IMPACT

This bill would result in the following revenue impact:

Revenue Impact – SB 1247 as Amended March 27, 2008 Effective for Applications Received On or After January 1, 2009 Assumed Enactment Date After June 30, 2008
Fiscal Year	2008/2009	2009/2010	2010/2011
Revenue Loss	No impact	No impact	< -$150,000

Any possible changes in employment, personal income, or gross state product that might result from this bill are not taken into account.

Revenue Discussion

The revenue impact is dependent on whether incorporating the current farmworker housing credit program into the low-income housing credit program would result in additional low-income housing that serves farmworkers and their households exclusively. A historical review of the existing farmworker housing income tax credit program indicates that less than ten taxpayers claim in aggregate under $10,000 in credits in any given year. Even if credits awarded annually triple in amount, the revenue impact of this bill would be less than $150,000 starting in fiscal year 2010/2011. This estimate assumes there would be a two-year delay from credit application to final award and use of the credit.
